Soviet Basketballers Beat U.S.

By Bernard Kirsch MUNICH, Sept. 10 (IHT).— The United States basketball team could not stop time from being turned back a second time last night and moved into a new dimension—as an Olympic basketball loser.

After having won every.
Olympic basketball gold medal and racking up 63 straight victories, the United States lost, the Imal, 51-50, to the Seviet Union and the clock. When the game ended, the Americans filed a protest because they said that the winning basket came seconds after the game chided. Today the Americans were losers again. The Federa-tion Internationale de Basketball Amateur, several times contradicting itself, refused to uphold the protest. The verdict of the five-member FIBA jury of appeals was "varied," and the official scorer, and reportedly the referee, said that indeed too much time had been played. They could do nothing, however, to change the protest was denied, team manager M.K. Summers said that We deserve the gold medal Don't construe our protest as disrespect." The United States said that all the disrespect came last night on the basketball court after it had staged a comeback and then a victory celebration. Though the U.S. team again played poorly on offense it moved ahead with 3 seconds to play, 50-49, on two foul shots by Kevin Collins. It was the first and only time the Americans had the lead.

After the free throws, the Russians, who had led by as many as 10 points in the second were confused. Joining them were the Brazilian referee and the Bulgarian umpire. As Collins was shooting the second shot, a horn sounded signaling a time-out for the Russians. The umpire still started the game, however, and two seconds later, seemingly with 1 second left, the referee halfed it. At this time, the U.S. squad acted as if it thought the game was over, and the players danced around the court, patting each other on the back as their fans came running down to offer congratulations.

FIBA rules state that once a player has the ball for the second foul shot, a time-out cannot be called. The officials thus did not honor the horn, but did give the Russians a second chance by allowing them to play out the I second of the 3 seconds, which had not expir-Nothing seemingly could be done in a 1-second span, and the United States, for the (Continued on Page 12, Col. 1)

Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Brandt also discussed a proposed treaty establishing relations between East and West Germany and the setting up of diplomatic relations between Bonn and Peking, the observers said.

Mr. Brandt said that he was grateful for Mr. Nixon's message and alluded to the widespread criticism of German handling of the Olympic incident. "It is good to know these days that there is so much understanding abroad in the face of unjustified criticisms and accusations."

He said that he told Mr. Kissinger that it was important "to strengthen good relations between the United States and West Germany in the months ahead of us as there are so many problems to be solved."

Earlier today, the presidential aide met with State Secretary Egon Bahr, chief Bonn negotiator in discussions with East Germany. Political observers said that the two men talked about the progress of the negotiations and especially the easing of restrictions on traffic between East lations in the area, The doglight, the first in more than two years between Israeli and Syrian planes, underscored the new tension in the Middle East caused by the slaying of 11 Israelis at the Olympic Games in Munich last week and the retaliatory attacks Friday by Israeli planes against Palestinian guerrilla bases inside Syria and Lebanon.

A New York Times correspon dent in Jerusalem, Terence Smith, sald conversations with Israeli government officials left the strong impression that Friday's raid and yesterday's incidents were the beginning, rather than the end, of the Israeli response to the Munich shootings. Retaliation Seen

Although no official policy has been amounted, the correspon-dent said, it appears evident that Israel had decided to retaliate for the shootings with a full-scala effort to cripple the fighting capabilities of the Arab guerrilla organizations.

Israeli troops were on alert today while the rest of the country celebrated the beginning of the Jewish new year, number 5733 on the Hebrew calendar, but no new incidents were reported. After three days that included Israeli strikes in the air and sea and a ground incursion into Lebanon, some Israelis said the slaying of the Olympic : thletes had been avenged somewhat.

...Last night, the Chief of Staff, Lt. Gen. David Elazar, said the raids were in retaliation not only for the Munich killings but also for a rising wave of attacks on Israel's frontiers with Syria and

'Continuous War'

"These actions were part of a continuous war" that should not be regarded as "begun today and finished tomorrow," Gen. Elazar told a television interviewer.

Asked why Friday's air raid was directed against bases of the el-Fatah organization when the fringe Black September group carried out the Munich murders, the general replied: "We do not make fine distinctions. The terrorist organizations, one and all, have declared war on us."

A Syrian Poreign Ministry official said today that continued Isrneli aggression against Arah states constitutes a great danger to peace in the Middle East and the rest of the world.

Abdel Ghanem Rafei, the ministry's press spokesman, said the Arab countries were not responsible for the attack by Palestinian guarrillas in Munich and "therefore Israeli accusations are with out foundation."

In addition to the air battle yesterday, the military spokesman here also reported that an Israeli Navy missile boat fought and sank a small attack boat manned by Palestinian guerrillas off the southern Lebanese coast early Friday morning.

The communiqué said that the guerrillas had opened fire on the Israelis with bazookas and machine guns. The Israelis returned the fire, it was said, sinking the guerrilla boat after a few minutes of fighting. Yesterday in Amman, a Jordantan military spokesman said 18 civilians were killed and 17 wounded at the Jordanian border village of Zunaiba, by four rockets fired during the Israeli-Syrian dogfight. U.S. Doctor Predicted His Suicide

Hitler Psychoanalyzed in 1943 War Study

By John Noble Wilford NEW YORK (NYT).-Late one night in October, 1943, a psychoanalyst in Boston stuffed a secret manuscript into his briefcase and boarded the Federal Express for Washington. He had just completed one of the more cerebral intelligence assignments of World War II, six months of probing the strange psyche of Adolf Hitler.

The psychoanalyst, Dr. Walter C. Langer, had done everything possible to learn what made Hitler "tick" so that the Allies might know what to expect and could plan accordingly. He had done everything, that is, short of putting the fuehrer on the couch. Now, 29 years after that October night, the secret psychological study of Hitler-which was

British war planners as the definitive analysis of the man they were up against—has been declasthe main part of a book. "The Mind of Adolf Hitler," which will be released by Basic Books on Sept. 22.

Dr. Langer interviewed a score of persons who had known Hitle: more or less intimately and who were available to American intelligence agencies. He comord books and newspaper accounts for clues to the dictator's behavior patterns. He read and reread "Mein Kampf," searching for p.esages revealing Hitler's unconscious drives.

This led to explorations of Hitler's toilet training and troubled

It is being published as abiding insecurity and driving sense of mission and omnipotence -all of which were included m the manuscript Dr. Langer was delivering to the Office of Strategic Services in Washington.

According to Dr. Langer in 1943, Hitler was "probably a neurotic psychopath bordering on schizopprenia."

Moreover, he saw Hitler as a weakling who masqueraded as a bully, Hitler the failure casting himself in the role, unconsciously for reasons of meotal self-preservation, as Hitler the Fuehrer,

Egyptian government, although angered by the Israell Air raids on Palestinian camps in Lehanon and Syria, is determined to avoid involvement in military action against Israel unless the Israelis attack Egyptian territory, political sources here said today.

The government is anxious to continue the diplometic campaign recently announced by President Anwar Sadat, these sources said. The campaign is aimed at gaining political and material support in the West in the wake of the withdrawal of the Soviet military presence here. It is also aimed at pressing for a negotiated settlement that would free the Egyptian territories occupied by Israel since the 1967 six-day war.

There has been concern here that the Israeli attacks followed hy the air battle hetween Syria and Israel might lead to a gencralized new military conflagration in the Middle East.

EEC Finance Chiefs to Seek No Gain Made A Monetary Policy in Rome In Talks on

By Don Cook

ROME, Sept. 10-Finance ministers of the 10 nations of the enlarged European Coolmon Market begin a two-day meeting here tomorrow in an attempt to put together common policles on the triple complexitles of inflation. European monetary union and international monetary reform.

There then will be a joint meeting ot foreign ministers and tinance ministers of the Ten on Tuesday to review overall political and monetary progress. The outcome will largely determine whether or not a European summit conference will follow in Paris in October. In addition, the decisions of the Europeans will give some indication of the direction in which things nught move at the International Monetary Fund, which is to meet in Washington later this month-

In neither case is the outlook very promising. Progress toward agreement on Europeau monetary union has not been sufficient so far to satisfy the French, and President Georges Pompidou has rate flexibility in a future system made it clear that he will move cancel the long-projected October summit talks if they are not going to produce something that satisties him. Conversely, the closer the Europeans move toward a otonetar," agreement that satisfies the French, the more it seems to be nutting them in conflict with the United tates over long-term IMP monetary reform, especially in the complex question of exchange-rate flexibility in any new monetary aystem.

For the Europeaus, a common reserve system and even perhaps one day a common currency is an ultimate goal. Hence, they are trying to get back to tixed exchange rates and narrower fluctuation of currency parlties. Without a close currency alignment, they cannot make their common agricultural policy really work. As a start, this means setting up a European

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (WF). Hoffa's claim that -Former Teamsters Union president James Holfa's attempt to visit North Vietnam, it turns out, extended across the top level of the Nixon administration and even reached Hanol Politburo member Le Duc Tho. This fuller, but still incomplete, account of Hoffa's effort to bargain for the release of American prisoners of war emerged Friday. According to the official, revised, Winte House account, Hoffa's shorted mission was promoted through uncoordinated levels ed through uncoordinated levels of the Justice and State Departments by "a very persistent" and "very aggressive" Hoffs attorney. William L. Taub of New York.

Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst, in an angry letter to Mr. Taub Friday night, said he was informed that Mr. Taub's admitted objective was to get parole restrictions removed on Hoffs "if Mr. Hoffs were to visit Hendi and obtain the release of

Hanoi and obtain the release of some prisoners." Hoffs is on parole from a prison sentence in-volving fraud and influencing a jury which acquitted him of an earlier charge of conspiracy. Mr. Kleindienst said Mr. Taub had presented that proposal to Deputy Attorney General Ralph E. Erickson, involving "the con-dition imposed in connection with the commutation of Mr. Hoffa's sentence." That condition bars Hoffa from resuming activities in the Teamsters Union. Last Decomber, President Nixon commuted Hoffa's 13-year sentence after Hoffa had served about 4 1/2 years. The Teamsters Union is supporting Mr. Nixon's re-election.

Rissinger's Answer

Mr. Kleindienst in his letter said Mr. Taub was told that any Hoffa venture to North Vietnam would have to be "on his own initiative." Mr. Kleindienst further charged that although Mr. Taub "indicated" to one of his assistants that he had "cleared a possible visit to Hanoi" with Henry A. Kissinger, presidential national security adviser. "I subsequently learned that no such visit had been cleared."

White House Press Secretary Ron Ziegler acknowledged that Mr. Kissinger last June discussed the trip with Hoffa's emissaries, but declined to give any official sanction to the mission. However, sold Mr. Ziegler, Mr. Kissinger urged Hoffs to put off the trip until after July 20 if he decided to pursue it as "a private effort."

U.S. Farm Aide Denounces McGovern Charge on Wheat

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (WP). -Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz yesterday labeled as "silly" Sen. George McGovern's charge that the Agriculture Department let a few exporters make windfall profits at the expense of American farmers and consumers in a wheat sale to the Soviet Union

On Friday, the Democratic presidential nominee said the exporters, benefiting from advance inside information, had profited unfairly in the huge grain deal,

"By attacking this historic sale with wild; and inaccurate charges," Mr. Butz said in a news conference, Sen. McGovern is engaging in another political flight of fancy and is jeopardizbenefit to the nation." He called Sen. McGovern's accusations "a silly political snipe hunt."

In a July 8 U.S. Soviet agreement on credit terms, the United States advanced the Soviet Union $500 million over three years in return for a Soviet pledge to buy $750 million worth of grain within three years, incuding at least $200 million worth the first

It was announced that tha principal Soviet interest was to purchase feed grains to bolster beef and poultry production and increase protein in the Soviet Russia is suffering from food shortages for the second consecutive year.

However, it became known later that the Soviet Union was buy-ing huge amounts of wheat. Tha Department of Agriculture now estimates the Soviet purchase as 400 million bushels more than me-fourth the total U.S. crop. Total Soviet purchases of all grains now exceed $1 billion.

In addition to Mr. Butz's counterattack, Cargill, Inc., one of the principal exporters, issued a statement branding Sen. Mc-Govern's charges as "unfounded, uninformed, in many cases patently absurd and overall extremely damaging to the open; competitive U.S. marketing system. However, Cargill spokesmen in Washington and Minneapolis refused to say how much graio it had sold the Soviet Union, when the sales were made. when the wheat was purchased by Cargilland how much in subsidies Cargill was receiving from the government, Spokesmen indicated they might give this information to a congressional subcommittee which opens hearings Thursday with Mr. Butz as the first witness.

"Farmers knew as much as anybody else," Mr. Butz re-

He said the department knew in April that the Soviet Union had sustained damage to its wheat crop. "We indicated at that time they would likely be buying wheat somewhere," said. "We didn't know where. We had oo idea it would be of the current magnitude nor did they." Mr. Butz said the possibility of wheat purchases was cited in the July a announcement of a U.S.-Soviet credit and volume partment did not know of the volume of Soviet wheat purchases until later in the month when exporters began applying for subsidies. He said the exporters also were taken by surprise, and even the Soviet Union was unaware of the extent of its wheat needs, as indicated by a second Soviet mission here to buy more.

Mr. Butz also defended Clarence Palmby, former assistant secretary of agriculture for international affairs, against conflict-of-interest charges. Mr. Palmby joined Continental Grain Co. which became the largest exporter in the deal.

"Palmby came to me in early May," said Mr. Butz. "He told me he had an offer from a grain company that was so attractive he felt that he could not turn it dnwn . . . Clarence felt, as I felt, that there would be a Russian sale down the road. We didn't

"There was absolutely no exchange of information, so far as I am able to ascertain, between anybody in this department and Clarence Palmby or any of his sociates during the entire time of these negotiations [June 28 to July 8] or the subsequent sale

Much of the dispute centers on exactly when it became clear that the deal would go through and the amount involved.

Electronics, Oil Firms Hope to Close Deals

By Theodore Shabad MOSCOW, Sept. 10 (NYT).-.
The arrival of two high-powered U.S. business delegations in Moscow today signaled a new round of intensive trade talks here this week coincident with discussions between Soviet leaders and Henry A Kissinger, President Nixon's national security adviser.

One group is a U.S.-sponsored trade mission of the electronic communications industry, which, because of its links to the defense too sensitive to figure in trade with the Soviet Union.

The mission, led by John L. Sodolski, staff vice-president of the Electronic Industries Association, includes top executives in such American industrial giants as International Tele-phone Telegraph Corp., General Dynamics Corp., General Electry, Co., and Radio Corporation of

The businessmen plan to hold talks with officials of the Soviet electronics industry in an effort to sell video and radio broadcast prodocts, cable television equipment and other communications systems. The prospects of joint ventures and licensing arrangements also may be explored.

Under the agreement, Occidental is expected to provide phosphoric acid, a basic fertilizer ingredient, from its Florida phosphate mines in ex-change for Soviet ammonia and urea, byproducts of Oatural gas that are used for making nitrogen

Arrangements between U.S. compenies and the Soviet Union thus appear to be going forward despite the failure of the two governments so far to work out the highly complex problems of an overall trada agreement.

Secretary of Commerce Peter G. Petersoo was unable to break the deadlock on major issues between the twn countries in nego-tiations here in July. The talks, within the framework of a newly established intergovernmental trade commission, are to be resumed, in Washington, in the

Panel Urges a Broad Revision Of U.S. Trade Policy for Reds

NEW YORK, Sept. 10 (AP) .--A panel representing 200 American businessmen and educators has urged a broad revision of U.S. trade policies toward Communist nations, including liberalization of credit terms and removal of virtually all restrictions on nonmilitary exports.

The recommendations were contained in a 68-page report, "A New Trade Policy Toward Com-munist Countries." prepared by the Research and Policy Committee of the Committee on Economic Development. The committee also joined with business groups in Germany, France, Britain and Sweden in recommending establishment of a new global economic agency to set ground rules for East-West

In its report on U.S. trade policies, the committee holds that current restrictions on East-West trade "almost certainly result in more loss than gain."

Citing political and ecocomic advantages to be gained from improved trade relations, the 63ember committee recommended: • That the United States remove all restrictions on exports to Communist countries with the exception of military equipment and the kind of advanced technology that would be useful in producing such equipment.

That U.S. policy on credit terms to Communist countries be aligned with that of other Western industrial countries, pending evement of international regulation of credit terms. . That the President be authorized to grant most-favored-nation treatment on trade with Communist countries provided that in return they extend com-pensatory benefits to the United

A statement accompanying the report said the recommendations did not apply to North Vietnam, North Korea and Cuba, where U.S. trade embargoes were imposed under the 1917 Trading With the Enemy Act. "The practical values to be served by removing restrictions on international trade include economic benefits but extend beyond them," the committee said. "Willingness to trade is in itself a sign of amity that helps dissipate tensions."

It cautioned, at the same time, that any advances in East-West trading depended on the willing-ness of Communist countries to reciprocate on the easing of restrictions and to deal with such problems as currency differences and the setting of fair trading standards.

others that he is what he is not that has saved him from insanity," Dr. Langer said. Dr. Langer accurately predicted that "as Germany suffers successive defeats, Hitler will become more and more neurotic" and in the end would commit suicide.

"It is probably true that he has an inordinate fear of death," Dr. Langer wrote at the conclusion of his anclysis. "But being a psychopath, he would undoubtedly screw himself up into the superman character and perform the deed."

Historians generally agree that Hitler killed himself on April 30, 1945, in his private rooms in the air-raid shelter of the Chancellory in Berlin. If he had hoped for some dramatic suicide, as Dr. Langer predicted he might, he was frustrated by the onslaught of advancing Soviet forces. In their haste. German troops falled to burn completely the corpse so the charred remains of Hitler were found four days later by Soviet soldiers.

Freudian Analysis

Dr. Langer reached his conclusions by applying Freudian techniques of analysis to what was known of the German dictator's early life and wartime behavior and by comparing the resulting data with the clinical histories of patients with "behavioral patterns, tendencies and sentiments very similar" to Hitler's.

In this way, Dr. Langer said, he was able to piece together what Hitler's childhood must have been like and why he was constantly struggling with an identity crisis -a personal struggle that almost brought the whole world down

Historians who have read the study are "struck by the accuracy of the predictions," John Toland, who is at work on a blography of Hitler, said.

Others cite it as a ploneering model in applying modern psychoanalytical techniques to the understanding of historical figures. Although still controversial, this technique has since been applied by Erik Erikson, the psychoanalyst, in a monograph on Hitler and in books on Martin Luther and Gandhi

Battle Royal In the 1943 analysis, Dr. Langer

Trom our experience with other neurotic psychopaths, we are probably on firm ground when we suppose that Hitler's mind is like a battle royal most of the time, with many conflicting and contradictory forces and impulses pulling him this way and that." Dr. Langer described the two Hitlers "that inhabit the same body and alternate back and forth." The one Hitler, he wrote, "is a very soft, sentimental and indecisive individual who has very little drive and wants nothing quite so much as to be amused liked and looked after. Tha other is just the opposite-a hard, cruel and decisive person with considerable energy who seeme to know what he wants and is ready to go after it and get it regardless of cost.

"It is the first Hitler who weeps profusely at the death of his canary, and the second Hitler who cries in open court. Heads will roll.' It is the first Hitler who cannot bring himself to discharge an assistant, and it is the second Hitler who can order the murder of hundreds, including his best friends . . .

Unlike some Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde persons, Dr. Lander said, Hitler could "adopt either role more or less at will." This he seemed to do in his speeches, which started nervously and awkwardly and then, perhaps through a form of self-hypnosis, turned to powerful tirades.

According to Dr. Langer, tha strong Hitler, the fuehrer personality, "is a grossly exaggerated and distorted conception of masculinity as Hitler conceives it" and a "cover-up for deep-lying tendencles that he despises.

Sexual Inadequacy Soma of these "weaknesses," known or suspected in 1943, included sexual inadequacy (perhaps impotence), a frail body and softness sometimes described as effeminate, his early failures as an aspiring artist and his gnawing suspicion that his real grandfather was Jewish.

That Hitler was never entirely successful in this "psychological maneuver," Dr. Langer said, could account for his many fears and anxieties his nightmares and insomnia, a fear of cancer and of gaining weight, his mistrust of nearly everyone around him and his apparently masochistic relations with women.

Of the struggle between the two Hitlers, which probably began long before Hitler came to power, Dr. Langer wrote:

"We may assume that in order. to quiet his fears, he sometimes imagined himself as a person who far surpassed his enemies in all the 'virile' qualities. Under these circumstances, he could conquer his enemies and do to them what he now feared they would do to

"This is, of course, pure wishful thinking, but evidently this play of imagery yielded him so much pleasure and so subdued his fear that he unconsciously identified himself with this superman

"Ke was no longer the weak and puny individual who was exposed to all kinds of attacks and indignities. On the contrary, he was fundamentally more power-ful than all the others. Instead of his being afraid of them, they should be afraid of him."

Dr. Langer suggests that this thinking could account in part for Hitler's hold on the Germans of the 1930s. They, too, felt weak and vulnerable, from defeat of World War I and the ensuing inflation. Hitler's anti-Semitism.

Hitler's Hold

Langer said, could be explained in part by his inner struggle. The Jew had "become for him the symbol of sex, disease and his perversion," Dr.: Langer wrote, and "as the masochist he really is, he derives a vicarious pleasura from the suffering of others in whom he can see himself."

Although little was known of Hitler's childhood in Austria, Dr. Langer reconstructed, from fragments of fact and the histories of similar psychopaths, some of the forces that might have influenced his behavior. Young Adolf hated and feared his father. a pompous customs official who drank heavily. Ha adored his mother, who was 23 years younger than the father, and she apparently doted on Adolf. The fact that four of the other children in the family died . in infancy may have stirred in Hitler his first fantasies as the "chosen one" and the "messiah." At some point, however, Hitler.

Hijack-Detector System Shown

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, Sept. 10 (AP).—A system to screen skyjackers which researchers say can detect concealed weapons more accurately than other existing devices has been shown here. Developed at Southwest Research Institute, the system is like other detectors in that it sounds off with a beeping tone when a bulky metal object, such as a gun, passes between its posts. But unlike other systems, which consist of magnetometers, the new device will not give false alarms when smaller metal items pass through, the researchers said.

In three months of testing at San Antonio International Air-port, about 1,300 persons have voluntarily gone through the detector and it has proven much more accurate than other systems, Richard Curtin, head of the research team, said.

Three Soviet Divisions Join 46 Along Border With China

By William Beecher

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10 (NYT). political-military pressure on -Well-placed officials in the adplinistration report that the Soviet Union has recently added three mechanized divisions to the already major buildup of troops along its long-contested border with China.

This brings to 49 the number of divisions known to be in the border area, which represents nearly onc-third of the entire Soviet Army, Analysis are puzzled at the latest development, especially in light of the helief in some quarters that the Soviet Union had decided to level off its army et about 46 divisions in the border area, at least until agreement on mutual force reductions in Europe freed Moscow to move additional units to Soviet Asia.

Moscow reportedly also plans to begin large-scale military maneuvers in the border region this month, possibly lasting as long as three months. The analysts generally agree that the Soviet Union has long since positioned more than enough troops in Soviet Asia to combat a potential but highly unlikely Chinese military move into disputed territory.

Possible Reasons

Officials offer a variety of explanations for the reinforcements: . It could represent & continuing effort by Moscow to apply

Peking to assume a less hostile stance

• It might be aimed at keeping open the option for a Soviet thrust into China, either to destroy that nation's nuclear arsenal or to exploit sudden political turmoil, say, following the death of Mao Tse-tung.

• It could be aimed at dissuading Peking from any aubstantial deployment of nuclear missiles trained on Soviet cities both in the Far East and in European Russia. The new troop movements are regarded as permanent rather than as a temporary shift coincident with the large war games. because new barracks, supply and administrative buildings have been constructed for the three new divisions, sources said.

The extent of the buildup, especially since 1968 when there were 15 Soviet divisions along the border, is regarded by American analysts as the principal motiva-tion behind China's improvement in relations with the United States and its costly efforts to develop a variety of nuclear

Well-placed officials at the Pentagon said that Chica has been working on at least four types of liquid-fueled missiles, some of which have been deployed in limited numbers.

Topsy-Turvy Olympics

Even without the unspeakable horror of the Arab guerrilla raid on the Israeli Olymplc squad, the 1972 Games in Munich have added no luster to the Olympic tradition.

The basic thesis of the Games is that uationalistic rivalries are submerged in the competition of individual and team excellence, all guided by the rules of good clean sport. The nonsensical passion with which all countries—and particularly the sugerpowers, the United States and the Soviet Union-count their collective medals has always made that a dublous proposition. It was made still more dublous this year by flagrant exhibitions of national bias by some of the judges in boxing, wrestling and diving.

Least emblematic of the spirit of sportsmanship is the autocratic conduct of the International Olympic Comittee, which specializes in nkases issued without henefit of hearing. Thus, the IOC stripped Rick De Mont of the gold medal he won in the 400meter freestyle swim and barred him from competing at all in the 1.500-meter, even though he personally had complied with all the intricate code of Olympic regulations. If there was anything wrong with De Mont's use of the ephedrine he has taken most of his life for treatment of asthma, the fault lay with the American Olympic doctors who had failed to pass on to the IOC hefore the race the information the swimmer had freely given them

Now the IOC has followed up with an equally authoritarian decree barring from Olympic competition forever Vince Matthews and Wayne Collett, who finished one-two in the 400-meter run. Their offense, as describcd by Avery Brundage, the IOC's crotchety president, was a "disgusting display" during the medal presentation at Munich.

Unquestionably, the slouching, defiant posture of the two black athletes did no credit to either, but the persistence they had shown in training up to perfection pitch demonstrated that they had no lack of the Olympic "ethic," That was especially true of Matthews, a Neighborhood Youth Corps worker from Brooklyn's slums, who had scaled the fences of locked school playgrounds to get his early training. His moving personal statement in Saturday's Times (final edition of the IHT :- a statement the IOC never gave him a chance to presentembodies a much better understanding of what ought to be the Olympic spirit than the coartinet's code prescribed by the com-

But from now on there should be no surprise. The Arab murderers in Munich have, in effect, served formal notice on the world that no international gathering for any purpose anywhere is automatically immune from potential attack. Earthbound buildings and vehicles' are as exposed as airplanes; and the more publicity surrounding an event or a meeting the more the danger that it will become a target. And Arabs are, of course, hardly the only ones capable of committing such crimes.

Guns in the House

As the summer slowly fades and the Congress grinds grudgingly through the rest of its work prior to adjournment, there is one blt of unfinished business that should not, in all conscience, he postponed until next year. That business is the gun control husiness. During this session, after years of trying, the Senate finally passed a bill outlawing Saturday Night Specials, the cheap inaccurate handguns, which glut the market place and which are useful mostly for killing and maiming human beings.

The action is now with the House. Hearings have already been held, but the Judiclary Committee bas yet to act. Apparently, a decision will be made sometime next week as to whether to attempt to obtain some gum control legislation this year. In our view, any course that seeks to avoid the issue is the avoidance of a clear public

There are, indeed, problems. Some liberal members wonder just what kind of legislation can be pushed through the Rules Committee and they wonder what will happen to the bill on the floor after that. It seems to us that we will all wonder about that if the congressmen favoring gun legislation let their questions bring them up short and we will also wonder how they construe their legislative responsibilities.

There can really be no substantial reason for not going forward. The Senate has taken at least a small oite on the bullet and has given the issue the kind of useful momentum which could give us some meaningful lcgislation this year. That momentum should not be wasted.

Moreover, the arguments for gun control remain as compelling as ever. They are buttressed by the recent FBI report on crime in the United States. The FBI reported that 65 percent of the murders committed in the United States in 1971 were committed with firearms and a full 51 percent of those mnrders were committed with handguns. In addition, the bureau reports that of the 126 law enforcement officers "killed due to felonious criminal actions" In 1971, 121 of them were killed by people using firearms. Of those, 94 were caused by handguns.

The Post has often expressed a preference for legislation limiting the possession of handguns to military personnel and law enforcement officers, to members of sporting clubs who use their guns there and leave them there, and to a carefully circumscribed number of others only after the most careful showing of need. Given the lateness in the session, that kind of legislation seems beyond reach this year. But the Senate-passed bill does not. With the Gallup organization showing that a majority of Americans has favored stricter gun laws for the past three decades, the House has an obligation to face this issue squarely and to face it now.

WASHINGTON. - Whenever we can intervention in Vietnam. No are confronted with a truly one can turn the clock back to herrible event - the accidental salvage for De Mont and Hart death of someone we love, say, or the murder of a national leader—our natural human instinct is to find a larger meaning for the tragedy. Our mlods rebel at accepting such a calamity as the product of bind chance or perverse circumstance. The cause, we feel, must be as enormous as the consequence, and we search for meaning in madness.

So it is with the slaughter of the Isracli athletes at the Munich Olympics. Not since the assassins' bullets cut down John and Robert Kennedy at momeous of political triumph have we been shown so starkly how pomp and pageantry can be shattered by acts

The analogies that come to mind as you search for meaning in the emotional after-shock of such an event are, perhaps, more prone to error than the considered judgments of a calmer time, but ever since last Tuesday I have been unable to shake the thought that there is a link between the tragedy of Munich and the tragedy of Vletnam-and perhaps a lesson.

The thought occurred that America had approached the Olympics very much as we approached Vletnam: as an arena of international competition, where cur prestige and standing would be tested in the eyes of the world: as a test we must meet as a matter of obligation and of national pride.

Courage, Blunders

As in Vletnam, so in Munich: The American performance was a tale of magnificent individual courage and endurance, marred by incredible bureaucratic blun-In both Vietnam and Munich, the American forces were so top-heavy in upperechelon incompetents that our logistics mobilization became a burden, not an aid, to the young men on the front line. As Red Smith wrote (IHT, Sept. 7): "The U.S. party included 168 coaches, trainers and other functionaries, which seems like enough to take care of 447 athletes. It wasn't enough, however, to get two world-record sprinters to the starting blocks for the 100meter dash" or to warn Rick De Mont he risked disqualification if be used his asthma modicine.

The officials' blunders that cost De Mont his gold medal and kept Eddie Hart and Rey Robinson from competing were incomprehensible and irretrlevable. But the despair and recriminations stemming from those blunders were overwhelmed by the greater tragedy of the guerrilla attack on the Israeli team. And there, perhaps, is the hard-earned lesson for all of us in this.

A blunder is a blunder-whether we are talking about the coaches' slip-ups in Munich or the Ameri-

By James Reston

WASHINGTON-Candidates for moratorium of busing school the presidency make certain dren and promising no n. assumptions about the condition of the nation and the world, and particularly about what kind of people we are and what we think, or at least what we will swallow.

For example, President Nixon's assumption is that while things are not ideal either abroad or at home, they are improving and would be a lot better if the Democrats cooperated with him and a great deal worse if George Mc-Govern were elected President, He deals primarily in trends

Standard Procedure

This, of course, is standard operating procedure for the "ins" who emphasize what is right and the "outs" who always emphasize what is wrong. But underneath these general assumptions, there are others that raise more personal questions about what kind of people we really are.

Nixon seems to assume that he has won the argument about the war, because Americans are no longer fighting on the ground. American casualties have almost ended and while he is still directing the most severe bombing in the history of the century, with appelling loss of life and disruption of families in both North and South Vietnam, the American people are either indifferent to these continuing tragedies or accept them as the unavoidable consequences of the enemy's policies and aggression.

Similarly, the administration assumes that while the present system of education and taxation may be unequal, a majority of the people are fairly well off. and oppose large cuts in the defense budget, busing of children to avoid segregation of the public schools and more help for. the welfare of the very poor, the old and the sick. . .

Well, hard as it is to generalize about such vast and slippery subjects, it would be difficult to prove that the President has misjudged the popular mood. "Welfare," which used to be a symbol of America's compassion, is now. regarded by many not only as an administrative mess, which it administer his office v is, but almost as a racket in which money is taken from the people who work to support the people who won't work.

Skyjacker Problem

By William F. Buckley Jr.

NEW YORK.—The Soviet bersome to set up an entirely—tion is clearly justified in Union—get this—doesn't want new international organization the initiative in protect to sign the proposed arrangement to curb skyjacking because it hasn't come in through the machinery of the United Nations, and the Soviet Union believes that it would set a dangerous precedent for countries or groups of countries to come together to impose sanctions under ad hoc rircumstances. So, wearly, the 17-nation group convened to discuss means of dealing with skyjacking plods along and, meanwhile, nothing happens. That was the complaint of the pilots who, last June 19, stopped flying for 24 hours, to the consternation of the entire world. If it had been only the Soviet Union, we'd all have been entitled to feel simply: there we gn again. The Soviet Union, through the exercise of the veto power. has made the Security Council an all but totally useless instrument. It has made lawlessness into high art, and objects to skyjackers for the single reason that occasionally a skyjacker picks on a Soviet airship to spirit away. Concerning the loss of property, the Russian Communists are altogether bourgeois.

But there were objections. though they were not voiced so strongly, also from Great Britain and from France and from Egypt. They too made the legal themselves with those on whom argument—that it would be cum-

2 Applying that form ganization was not the cause of any country that harbo specific problems. Great Britain, with its considerable ties to the Middle East, is afraid that she will work herself into a position of having to embargo air service to the countries in that part of the world. That would not only greatly inconvenience British businessmen, it would throw a lot of air busin the hands of other airlines that refused to go along. promises.

Israeli society, like that of each new nation, is rent hy internal conflict, yet all domestic discord vanishes once the Israelis ara made to realize that they face an enemy motivated by only ona desirs—not to discuss peace terms and boundary lines, but to exterminate them

Peace Less Likely

The only likely political effects of the assassinations, then, is to make peace in the Middle East less likely. The majority of Israelis are driven to a harder, unyielding, more extreme posi-tion. Many Arabs, openly or secretly will sympathize with the exploits of lack September and similar groups.

But the fact that the terror is ineffectual does not mean that it will be discontinued in the near future. It corresponds to a deep-seated urge; it is born out of impotence and frustration which must find an outlet. And since it cannot find an oulet inside Israel, apart from sporadic acts of violence like the Lydda Airport massacre, further for-eign assassinations of Jews and perhaps also non-Jews must be expected in the years to coma attacks against tourists, diplomats and perhaps even heads of

It is quite unrealistic to expect degree of solidarity among community of nations in combating these senseless acts of terror, The Russians - recently have come out strongly in support of the terrorist groups, perhaps to counterbalance their setback in Egypt, The European nations, especially France, do not want to offend the Arab govern-ments, because their oil supplies still depend to a large degree on imports from North Alrica and the Middle East, Most Asian and African nations are not directly concerned with the whole affair, nise the Arab governments whose decision is psychologically support they occasionally need in tandable: the thirst for the United Nations and in other the United Nations and in other international forums, Certain security measures will be strengthened in the future, and it is likely that the Israelis will take draconian steps to reduce the risks facing their nationals

> The debate insida Israel over whather to reintroduce capital punishment for acts of terror in time of war has continued for years, and it is quite "possible that those who have advocated sterner measures as a deterrent will now have their way.

Israeli Hostages

The reinstatement of capital punishment would not necessarily imply the immediate execution of those sentenced to death; they would simply become hostages in Israeli hands, whose lives would be in jeopardy in case of further terrorist attacks against Israeli citizens abroad. Whether such a policy of deterrence would work is not certain, for those who perpetrate these acts of murder ara not necessarily motivated hy rational considerations, nor is itcertain how much they really matters are negotiated.

Terror has been effective on occasion against individuals, but never when conducted by foreigners against a whole nation. It can be predicted with almost mathematical certainty that one day even the members of the Black September and their allies will understand that their killings and bombs have not made the slightest impact on the state they want to destroy. On the contrary, their acts have weakened the prospects of the Palestinians both morally and politically. There is no doubt that this stage will reached sooner or later, and it is a sad thought that not a few innocert people will be killed or injured until that day. The terrorists are only a fewbut even a small group can create an image and influence world opinion if the majority of their fellows Co not dissociate themselves from its activities. ### Why a Roosevelt Supports Nixon

James Roosevelt, eldest son of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was elected to six terms in Congress as a Democrat and ran nnsuccessfully for governor of California (1950) and mayor of Los Angeles (1965). He wrote this for the Los Angeles Times. .

By James Roosevelt

OS ANGELES.-All Democrats and American citizens in general have a right to ask for the reasons why certain Democrats in this coming election will vote for a Republican, Richard M. Nixon. Here are some of them in necessarily abbreviated

We believe the powers and opportunities of the office of the President are so vest that Americe should not deny the incumbent a second term unless the alternative candidate is clearly a better prospective user of those powers and opportunities or unless the incumbent has notably failed in his leadership of the President Nixon, from any obfective viewpoint, has opened doors and initiated new sources of trade, disarmament and overall avenues for the peaceful solution of some of the world's most press-ing problems by his courageous visits to Peking and Moscow. His handling of Middle Eastern affairs has lessened tensions and he has given aid to Israel, our best ally in that area, in a manner which has evoked spoken appreciation. Contrast this with the statement of Sen. George S. McGovern that he would give up American naval bases in Greece because we don't like the nondemocratic Greek government. Is that enough reason to give the Russians complete control of the Eastern Mediterranean and expose Israel to indefensible pressure from hostile naval forces?

Open to Contention

The Nixon handling of the Vietnam war is more open to contention. On one hand he has withdrawn American ground forces from the combat area in orderly and rapid program. He has offered a peace plan, obviously more than just and fair, and received until now no response showing any real desire for a cease-fire from the dictator-ship of North Vietnam. One must wonder, if North Vietnam is sincere in not wanting to impose control on South Vietnam, why it has not made some sort of cease-fire offer, while political

On the other hand, the continued bombing and the precise manner of its renewal are certainly open to criticism from a moral standpoint. But what does the President's opponent offer?
An abject pullout of military forces after which ha would go to Hanoi "to beg" for the release of our prisoners of war. This would save a few American lives, many North Vietnamese lives and assure a bloodbath of South Viet-

On top of this, for anyone to say, as McGovern has said, that begging will assure the return of the prisoners within 90 days is just plain demagogic. This is particularly so when most knowledgeable people foresee as a bargaining ploy a heavy demand, if not blackmail, for an American dollar rehabilitation plan. But no beggar has yet won a fair deal, or any deal, except captivity, from a dictatorship, Everybody wants peace. Some want peace at any price to America's future. want peace and badly, but not at any price nor at a dishonor-

Clearly Drawn

On the domestic side the issues are even more clearly drawn. In four years, the Nixon administration bas halved the rate of inflation; there has been no decrease in unemployment but over 2 1/2 million more people are on jobs; husiness activity is steadily increasing; social security benefits have been increased substantially and a good start made on reducing the chaos of the welfare problem.

Contrast this with the almost unbelievable inconsistency of Mc-Govern's position on taxes and welfare. Four differing solutions on welfare and taxes since 1970 forced by the exposura of the faulty mathematics and the patently unsound basis behind them. When the heat was on the "bold new proposals," Mc-Govern melted them. Everyone is entitled to some mistakes but not to such a continuing and backward-stretching series.

President Nixon isn't perfect either. Democrats, including myself, are not happy with his Supreme Court appointments, but he didn't veer from 1,000 percent support to zero. What kind of appointments can the country expect after the Eagleton, Salinger and O'Brien fiasco?

There isn't much change in this from the man who as a delegate in 1948 left the Democratic party to vote for the nomination of Henry Wallace at the Progressive party convention. But the campaign heat brought a return to Harry S Trumau before November. There is no growth from the man who voted on both sides of the issues in the anti-labor Landrum-Griffin legislation of 1959, who voted in the Senate to repeal section 14 (KB; of the Tait-Hartley Act and cast a vote at the behest of the special interest wheat exporting companies.

Rights Uncertainties

There are also inconsistencies in the McGovern record on civil rights. McGovern cosponsored some but initiated no civil rights legislation on his own and all eight hills he cosponsored never left the committee stage.

To be president, a man must have achieved a certain toughness of spirit and soul. It usually comes from some searing inci-dent, personal or political. For my father it was a nearly fatal

Giscard d'Estaing Interview

French View on Monetary Reform

Two weeks before the onnual International Monetary Fund meeting (Sept. 25) begins in Washington, and the first cautious steps toward a new world monetary agreement ara taken, French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing talked with Arnaud de Borchgrave of Newsucck. These are some highlights from their frank discussion as published in the issue of Newsweek out today.

BORCHGRAVE - Many feel there is no real solution to the International monetary problem until Europe becomes a veritable monetary entity. Do you think the political will to bring this about exists today?

GISCARD D'ESTAING - No doubt about it. You will see in the coming weeks. Differences over horrendously complex technical problems tend to give public opinion a different impression. But look at the progress during the past year. May, 1971, total confusion. July, 1972, agreement to stick to fixed parities among Europeans and refusal of all individual floats. Sterling is only a momentary exception. Britain has agreed to return to the fold as soon as possible.

O - Deesn't monetary union presuppose a greater degree of economic integration first?

A-Yes and that's why we're now speeding up the economic timetable-for example, tha French proposal, accepted by the others, for joint measures to fight inflation. We're now drafting a Finally, do I now love the "old Nixon"? Have I forgotten Jerry list of subjects on which we must glas? Flatly, no. But a man force the pace of integrationis entitled to grow. Q-How much longer can the Smithsonian arrangements hold before another monetary crisis

A - Finance ministers have

frequently covered themselves in ridicule with their forecasts. Nothing is eternal. But the Smithsonian accords are much more realistic than some seem to believe. There have heen no destructive speculative movements in recent months. The proof of their effectiveness was the recent decision of the U.S. Federal Reserve Board to intervene in currency markets to defend the parity of the dollar.

Q-How would you go about ending the special role of the U.S. dollar in the world's monetary system?

A-Not with a campaign against the dollar. That's counterproductive. Under the Bretton Woods system, central banks were only required to keep gold and working balances in other currencies. A flood of dollars subsequently joined the parade. And lately West Europe found itself in the position of financing the growing deficits of the U.S. bal-ance of payments. Under a new system, central banks should only accumulate gold, SDRs and keep working balances in different national currencies. The international community will then agree to settle debts only hy selling internationally accepted assets and not by accumulating unwanted dollars as it is presently doing. The key question then is what happens to present dollar halances. We could consolidate them under one roof and then under them under one roof and then gradually reduce them as new SDRs are issued. If we agree on a new system in 1974, along with the substitution transition, and, if the U.S. halance of payments continues to improve there is no reason why we can't have it functioning by 1976.

Q-Most of the bankers and financial experts I have talked with in recent weeks believe another devaluation of the dollar is inevitable. Do you agree?

A-This will depend entirely on inflation rates on both sides of the Atlantic. At the present time, things seem to favor the United States. Q-Why do you object to the link the U.S. wants to establish between monetary reform and international trade negotiations? Is it wrong for the United States to insist on a reasonable improvement in its balance of payments before tackling monetary reform?

A-Improvement doesn't depend only on others. It's primarily an internal American matter. Tha Common Market is not responsible for your deficit. The EEC, as a matter of fact, is running a blg deficit in its trade with the United States.

Q-Why is France so insistent on a further revaluation of gold?

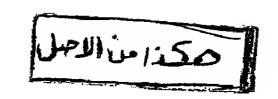

A-We aren't. But gold is still the most important asset in central banks-about $44 billion worth today. But it's a frozen asset as no bank is going to unload gold at $38 an ounce when the free rate is close to $70. How to get this asset back into circulation is the practical problem,

Q—And short of an official gold hike, do you feel we're headed for yet another monetary

A-I don't see the same storm warnings we spotted in the spring of 1971. But it's abnormal to continue to freeze the largest part of our assets.

Japan is overstuffed with them, the fact is the banks can only borrow dollars at home on a short-term basis. But with the increasing undertaking for long-term commitments, they need to assure, themselves of mediumterm funds at a fixed rate.

While some bankers argue that the banks would do better to seek their five year money by issuing notes, there apparently is a pres-tige and public relations element in getting established in the CD market.

The banks are not only lending money to the worldwide network of Japanese trading componies, but are becoming more aggresive in getting new business. One of the biggest surprises of the week was the news that Texaco had placed $25 million of 15-year bonds with four banks in Tokyo. The bonds carry a 7 3/4 percent coupon and an issue price of 97 3/4. Bankers here were struck by both the relatively small amount-in June Texaco had initiated and then dropped plans for an $80 million issue here, balf in bonds and half in notes at 7 3/4 and 7 1/4 percent, respec-tively—and the generous terms.

The only explanation offered was that the Tokyo placement had been negotiated and agreed upon some weeks ago, when the terms appeared competitive with those on the Euromarket. There is little doubt that in today's market, such an issue could be done here at 7 1/2 percent at par and some bankers suggest 7 1/4 at a discount would even have been possible given the small amount sought.

Overall, the dollar-bond mar-ket held stendy last week with

NEW YORK, Sep. 10 (NYT) .--With the passage of Labor Day, a new season has started in the business world and the annual economic forecasting derby for the year ahead has hit full stride.

Business, abounding with optimism, is primed for continuance of the boom that was renewed about 19 months ago.

The combination of unrelenting strength in consumer spending, especially for automobiles, housing and durables, plus rising business investment for new plants, equipment and inventories, has provided the economy with much of its great momentum,

The latest report on retail sales across the country-for July-was particularly encouraging. The gain was 2 percent over June and 11 percent over July of last year. And the tide continues to run in that direction Meanwhile, new-car sales surged 11.6 percent in August to a near record and business capital spending for 1972 is now projected for a strong 9.7 percent gain after essing somewhat in the second quarter.

While most of the standard, major business barometers, such as industrial production, personal income, retail volume and business spending, are all still pointed upward, some of the less obvious and less dramatic ones—airline traffic, truck sales, help-wanted advertising, executive-job openings and new business formations -are also auguring better days for the nation's econooiy, Airline passenger traffic, for instance, picked up strongly in August, indicating gains of 10 to 11 percent for the year over 1971; truck sales this year show a 35 percent rise; the index of belpwanted advertising in July stood first two quarters of the year. inflationary pressure. Moreover at 193 percent of the 1967 base, a rise of 10 points in the year, and new business incorporations for the first half of the year were up more 13 percent from the 1971

It appears now that the cur-rent quarter will achieve another galn of about $30 billion in the gross national product, closely matching the achievement of the

This would virtually assure an in-crease of perhaps $110 billion, or around 10 percent, for 1972, with two-thirds of it real growth not accounted for by higher prices. It Blso emboldened the economic seers to predict continued strong gains for 1973. The strong productivity gains of the last year may begin to diminish in 1973, imposing added there is a threat of greater labor strife or an acceleration of wage gains next year in view of the large number of workers-more than four million-scheduled to be involved in contract negotiations in several major industries.

Many economists have been assuming the enactment of some tax increase next year because of the decidedly dangerous federal budget situation—after a deficit of $23 billion in the fiscal year that ended last June 30, and a further deficit of perhaps $35

billion for the current fiscal year. International Problems

Difficulties on the international scene include the effort to re-structure the world's monetary system and improvement of the U.S. trade balance—running a deficit of more than $4 billion this year.

As the stock market moved through its post-Labor Day week, prices declined every day, dropping quite sharply Wednesday. Prices wobbled just slightly lower for the four-day period in a move that by late Friday afternoon did not appear highly significant. The Dow-Jones industrial averege, which was down 8.81 points last week (a drop of less than 1 percent), closed Friday at $61.24 month earlier it stood at virtually the same place.

Interest rates continued to climb as the Federal Reserve sold Treasury bills and took other action to son up what it described as a temporary injection of reserves into the commercial banking system.

With the federal government taking action that resulted in higher interest rates, bond prices

It's fun to read the ads in the Herald Tribune —

for people, places, goods

Europe, all over the world.

And if you want to place an ad - a singic « Personal »

item or a whole campaign -

no better medium than the Trib. Rates are reasonable.

AUGUST 1914

(First a two-part review.)

By Alexander Solzhenitsyn, Translated from the Russian by Michael Glenny. Farrar Straus & Giroux. 622 pps. $10. Russian language version: Association Press, New York. 576 pps. Paperbnund. $7.)

Reviewed by Simon Karlinsky

ALEXANDER SOLZHENIT- novel, is based on Solzhe-SYN'S writings up to 1967 grew out of his personal experiences in a slave-lebor camp, a secret prison for scientists and the cancer ward of a Tasbkent hospital and were produced, obviously, in response to the urge to bear testimony about the nature of his times.

Since then he has devoted himself to his original lifelong project, conceived as early as 1936, researched in part in 1937-39 and interrupted by war, imprisonment cancer and the need to write his other fiction. This project is a series of novels about World War I and the beginnings of the revolution, of which the first part, "August 1914," was published in Paris in the summer of 1971 in Russian. It has now been made available in the United States both in English and in the original language. Thematically and stylistically the book constitutes an entirely new departure for Solzhenitsyn; and it is, if anything, even more remarkable than his other work.

Judging by the huge number of characters, some of whom make only brief initial appearances, "August 1914" is only the first segment of an enormous literary-historical fresco which should take Solshenitsyn decades to complete. The central and longest section of the book is fictionalized military history. outlining in excruciating detail several days of the disastrous Russian offensive against the Germans at the very beginning of the war. Solzhenitsyn's encyclopedic erudition, which seems to encompass the most diverse fields (medicine in "Cancer Ward," technology in "The Pirst Circle") now turns out to include an awesome command of military science. The precision of his battle scenes should delight the military history buff. But readers usually given to skipping military passages will also be gripped by the vivid por-trayals of the participants and observers of these battles. At least two of these warriors, the historical General Samsonov and the fictional Colonel Vorotyntsev have been drawn by Solzhenitsyn with such mastery and in such depth that they are likely to enter the gallery of the finest Russian literary characterizations of all time. Framing the military sections are scenes of civillan life, Of particular interest in these por-tions of the novel are Solzhenitsyn's semi-fictionalized por-traits of his own parents and their families. Thus the figure of the young Cossack student Isaaky Lazheni'syn ("Sanya"), who visits Tolstoi and discusses moral philosophy with him at the beginning of the nitsyn's father, who died before the novelist was born. "August 1914" has already been compared to "War and Peace." It is a measure of Solzhenitsyn's achievement that his book is not instantly dwarfed by such a comparison. But, then, all of Solshenitsyn's earlier work was also deeply involved with Tolstoi, both as a literary example and as a moral force. The parallels with Dostoevski, occasionally played up by Solzhenitsyn's foreign publishers for commercial reasons, are, on the other hand, much more tenuous. the classical Russian Among authors, the example of Anton Chekhov is far more germane. Like Chekhov, Solzhenitsyn brings to the art of literature methods of precise observation derived from the exact sciences

(physics and mathematics in his case, medicine and blology in Chekhov's; like him he questions all the basic assumptions, all the idees reques of his age. The two writers share a deep understanding of peasants and peasant life and are alone in Russian literature in their freedom from the traditional Russian idealization of this class. Both manage to love mankind while having no illusions about its potential for evil, and both overt preaching, preferring to present the ugiler aspects of reality objectively and to leave it up to the reader to decide which character is a villain. In "August 1914" the confrontation between the idealistic young revolutionary Sasha Lenartovich, able to think only in slogans and cliches, and the perceptive Vorotyntsev, loyal to the regime but able to see the evils of the system with far greater clarity than the system with far greater clarity than the sullen youth, is quintessenticlly Chekhovian in

It would be wrong, however, to restrict Solzhenitsyn's literary antecedents to the 19th century. Much of his verbal art has its origins in the word-conscious, oral speech-oriented tradition ploneered before the revolution by Alexei Remizov (despite his overwhelming impact on Soviet literature, Remizov became an imperson when he emigrated to Paris in the early 1920s) and continued by the early Soviet writers who developed Remizov's discoveries, e.g., Mikhail Zosh-chenko and Andrei Platanov.

lished expectations and tradi-

Russian Sharpshooter

Overlooked in the mess was the poor playing of the U.S. team. It refused to shoot from the outside while a Russian sharpshooter, Sergei Belov, popped away and finished with 20 points. The Russians rushed to B 5-0 lead, with the United States scoreless for nearly 3 minutes. The Russians had a 29-19 lead and led at the half, 26-21. It was soon 38-28, and with the count at 44-36, the United States, led by Kevin Joyce, started a come-back. Joyce hit three baskets and cut the margin to 47-44.

With the Soviet Union ahead at 49-48. Collins stole the ball and drove down the court. He was fouled, went down but came up to make the two free throws. Then came the final 3, 4 or seconds, and the U.S. loss. It sort of fits in with the scheme of these Olympics, and ironically, the ending typifled what is supposed to be the Olympic spirit. How often do both teams have winning cele-

In successive thrillers, Lasse Viren, a 23-year-old policeman, completed a brilliant double by taking the 5,000 meters in an Olympic record of 13 minutes 26 and 4 tenths accords, coming up with the big stretch kick to overcome the defender, Mohammed Gamoudi of Tunisia, and Ian Stewart of England, Viren also won the 10,000 meters.

Steve Prefentaine, of Coos Bay, Ore., the U.S. hope, whirled into the stretch in a tight threesome, hut lost the bronze in the last 50 yards, tiring so badly that he stumbled and almost fell as he finished fourth. .

Then. Pekka Vasala, a 24-yearold Finn, came from behind to best the defending champion, Kipchoge Keino of Kenya, in the 1,500 meters. Vasala defeated the Kenyan, already the steeplechase winner, by four yards in 3:363, in the year's fastest "metric mile."

Rod Dixon of New Zealand was third in 3:37.5.

In the women's 4×400 meter relay. East Germany, anchored by Olympic champlon Monika Zehrt, simply was untouchable as it won in a world record 3:33, winning by 15 yards.

Pole Scores In Shot Put; Woods Is 2d

MUNICH, Sept. 10 (IHT).-In the comparative calm before the grand track and field finale in Olympic Stadium, Randy Williams, 17 days past his 18th birthday, earned the first field-event gold for the United States here with a 27 foot 1/2 inch long jump: by one-half inch the United States lost the shot put for the first time in 36 years to Poland's Wladyslaw Komar, and the Soviet Union's Ludmila Bragina set a world record of 4 minutes 1.4 seconds in the women's 1,500

Komar, who had never finished higher than third in major international competition in 10 years of throwing the 16-pound shot, bettered his own day-old Olympic mark with a career best of 69 feet 6 inches on his first effort in the final and 310-pound George Woods of the United States, silver medalist four years ago, had to be content with another silver at 69-5 1/2.

Woods and teammate Al Feuerbach, the only 70-footers of the year, were second and fifth, respectively, with sub-normal tosses for them. On his last toss, Woods marking the spot of Komar's Olympic record, but the throw measured only 69-3/4.

The top six, including Brian Oldfield of the United States, eclipsed Komar's day-old Olympic mark and surpassed the 1968 winning throw of Randy Matson. the world record-holder who couldn't make the U.S. team this time.

The first set went in workmanlike manner to Mrs. King, as it seems to have gone in most of her important matches: She broke Miss Melville once, held her own service, and that was that. She had broken Mrs. Court once each set in the semifinals,

Mrs. King broke Miss Melville again in the third game to start the inevitable, but when Miss Melville finally broke Mrs. King in the sixth game, it was the first time the champion had lost her service since the quarterfinals.

Miss Melville went shead, 5-4, as the winds contributed to Mrs. King's discomfort more than her opponents. But with the chips down, Miss Malville's errors induced rather than her own doing -allowed Mrs. King to break easily at love and walk off with the prize (a car was an extra added bonus prize)

Nicklaus's 5-over-par round was the highest he has had in this series, which he has won four times. The event finishes with 18 holes today.

Although a wind swept over the Firestons Country Club course to add to the scoring difficulty of the par-70 layout of 7,180 yards, Nicklaus said the weather conditions were not a factor in my game or in the two double-bogeys I took. I just wasn't sharp after a two-week layoff."

Brewer, the Canadian Open champion, took the runner-up spot with a 38-35, Trevino, the British Open champion, had a 37 on each nine for his 74.

Poland Beats Defending Titlist Hungary in Soccer Final, 2-1

MUNICH. Sept. 10 (UPI).— Poland beat Hungary, 2-1, in Olympic soccer today, coming from behind against the defending champion. It was the first time in history the soccer gold medal had gone to Poland.

The Poles, one goal behind at half-time on B rain-soaked field, tock full command in the second half against the gold medalists in the last two Games.

Hungary'a left winger, Bela Varadi, made it 1-0 in the 42d minute, scoring with a nerrov-engled shot ofter B defensive mistake by Poland.

In the second half midfield player Kazimierz Deyna tied the score in the 47th minute, dribbling past two opponents, and scored on a powerful left-footed shot into the lower-right corner of the net.

Winning Goal Deyna also scored Poland's winning goal in the 68th minute, after a mistake in the Hungarian

The Poles were faster to the ball, superior in shooting and better in ball-handling. Their stars were the three strikers. Zygfryd Szoltysik, Włodzimrerz Lubanski, and Robert Gadocha, and, of course. Devna.

Antol Duani, Hungary's top scorer, was below par after a collision with a Pole in which his head was cut shortly after the kick-off. He was replaced at the end of the game.

Russia and East Germany played to a 2-2 in overtime to share the bronze medal.

Russian Sharpshooter

Overlooked in the mess was the poor playing of the U.S. team. It refused to shoot from the outside while a Russian sharpshooter, Sergei Belov, popped away and finished with 20 points. The Russians rushed to B 5-0 lead, with the United States scoreless for nearly 3 minutes. The Russians had a 29-19 lead and led at the half, 26-21. It was soon 38-28, and with the count at 44-36, the United States, led by Kevin Joyce, started a come-back. Joyce hit three baskets and cut the margin to 47-44.

With the Soviet Union ahead at 49-48. Collins stole the ball and drove down the court. He was fouled, went down but came up to make the two free throws. Then came the final 3, 4 or seconds, and the U.S. loss.

It sort of fits in with the scheme of these Olympics, and ironically, the ending typifled what is supposed to be the Olympic spirit. How often do both teams have winning cele-

Then. Pekka Vasala, a 24-yearold Finn, came from behind to best the defending champion, Kipchoge Keino of Kenya, in the 1,500 meters. Vasala defeated the Kenyan, already the steeplechase winner, by four yards in 3:363, in the year's fastest "metric mile."

Rod Dixon of New Zealand was third in 3:37.5. In the women's 4×400 meter relay. East Germany, anchored by Olympic champlon Monika Zehrt, simply was untouchable as it won in a world record 3:33, winning by 15 yards.

The first five teams beat the world record of 3:28.5, the sixth tied it, and every team in the final except last-place Russia cet a national record. The U.S. team of Mable Pergerson, Madeline Manning Jackson, Cheryl Tousseint and Kathy Hammond was second and West Germany third. The women's 4 × 100 meter relay saw West Germany's Heldi Rosendahl, the long jump champion and pentathion runner-up, send the growd into a frenzy by coming from behind to defeat the 100 and 200-meter champion, who had hit the wire in front in eight previous heats and finals here.

The West German quartet tied the world record at 42.8, while the U.S. team, suffering from a bad pase on the last exchange, lest the bronze medal to Cuba by three hundredths of B second, both were officially clocked in 43.4

The men's 1,500-meter relay. which the Americans were favored before Vince Matthews and Wayne Collett were banned for their "disgusting display" on the victory stand after running one-two in the 400 meters, was won by Kenya for its second gold medal. Julius Sang ran 44.7 on the anchor leg for a 2:59 Kenyan team clocking, Britain was second Prance third and West Germany, leading by five yards at the bell, collapsed into fourth place.

Only the United States, which holds the world record, and Kenya have ever bottered three minutes in this 4 x 400 test. The United States di.' not participate today as it could not field foor Yuri Tarmak, B 26-year-old Russian, won the high juump at 7 feet 3 3/4 inches. East Germany's Stefan Junge, 22, won the silver medal, and 18-year-old Dwight Stones, a UCLA freshman, did the Fosbury flop for third. Both cleared 7-3, but Junge did it on his second try, Stones on his third.

The ninth gold medal today went to the Soviet Union's Faina Melnik, the world record-holder, 218-7, as the first six beat the Olympic record. Argentina Menis of Romania was the silver medalist and Vassilka Stoeva of Bulgaria was third. The weather for the marathon was parfect, in the high 60s under dark clouds, which, when the day was done, ended in a thunder and electric storm. Not a drop of rain fell on the Olympics during the competitions, which began Aug. 27.

The first American to win the 26-mile 285-yard marathon in 64 years, Shorter was preceded into the stadium by a mystery runner. The crowd, which knew that Shorter had held a big lead since the tenth mile through Munich's streets and parks, wondered if he had collapsed, as so manyleaders have in this race.

The mystery was settled in 30 seconds, as Shorter romped into the stadium with arms upraised in a salute to the crowd. The other runner turned out to. 2 West German student indulging in horseplay.

Pole Scores In Shot Put; Woods Is 2d

MUNICH, Sept. 10 (IHT).-In the comparative calm before the grand track and field finale in Olympic Stadium, Randy Williams, 17 days past his 18th birthday, earned the first field-event gold for the United States here with a 27 foot 1/2 inch long jump: by one-half inch the United States lost the shot put for the first time in 36 years to Poland's Wladyslaw Komar, and the Soviet Union's Ludmila Bragina set a world record of 4 minutes 1.4 seconds in the women's 1,500

Komar, who had never finished higher than third in major international competition in 10 years of throwing the 16-pound shot, bettered his own day-old Olympic mark with a career best of 69 feet 6 inches on his first effort in the final and 310-pound George Woods of the United States, silver medalist four years ago, had to be content with another silver at 69-5 1/2.

Woods and teammate Al Feuerbach, the only 70-footers of the year, were second and fifth, respectively, with sub-normal tosses for them. On his last toss, Woods marking the spot of Komar's Olympic record, but the throw measured only 69-3/4.

The top six, including Brian Oldfield of the United States, eclipsed Komar's day-old Olympic mark and surpassed the 1968 winning throw of Randy Matson, the world record-holder who couldn't make the U.S. team this time.

Missed by Inch.

Dave Wottle, the golf-capped winner of the 800 meters last week relied on his thunderbolt stretch run once too often. Trailing, as always, in the first 1,500meter run semifinal. Wottle surged from ninth place and missed third place by an inch. Only three in each heat qualify. but the fastest fourth also makes it to the 10-man final. Wottle sweated out two more heats, and

When Duke's Bob Wheeler, of Baltimore, finished up the track in this heat, the United States had no 1500-meter finalist for the first time since 1956. Jim Ryun, who tripped and fell and was shut out in Friday's first round, made repeated epocals to ba advanced to the semifinals, but the International Amateur Ath-letic Federation Council twice rejected his plea that he had been the victim in the collision that costed him. Miss Bragina, a 5-5 110-pound Russian of 29 years, whose best 1,500 meters before this year was 4:13.2, went from ninth to first with two laps to go and her finish in 4:01.4 helped the next four— Gunhild Hoffmeister of East Germany (4:02.8), Italy's Paols Cacchi (4:02.9), Karin Burneleit of East Germany (4:04.1) and Britain's Shella Carey (4:04.2) to beat the world record, which the Russian had broken in a heat and in the semifinals. It was tha first time the women's 1,500 was run in the Olympics. Jesse ABRAMSON.

McBreen Moved Up In De Mont's Race

MUNICH, Sept. 10 (UPI).-Tom McBreen of the United States, who finished fourth in the men's 400-meter freestyle swim in the Olympics, will be awarded the bronze medal for third place, the International Amateur Swimming Federation announced today.

He was moved up because another American Rick De Mont, was disqualified from first place by the Olympic medical commission after a showed he had taken ephedrine, a banned drug.
